

Wings Ready, Where's the Clip?

TICK.

Hello! We're looking for Hezarfen Ahmed Çelebi.

Welcome. That's me. I'm looking for something too.

Your wings are here. You can't have lost them!

Not those. A small fastening clip is missing.

A small but important part?

Yes. The team goes up the tower this afternoon. But I won't fly without it.

Let's find the small part first. The big wings can wait.

It was in this tray this morning. We checked the bench and chests.

Let's start when you last saw it. What were you doing?

I wiped the tray. Then Yusuf and I checked the wings.

Sounds like our part had a busier morning than we did.

May we look in those empty boxes?

Of course. I'll check the tool shelf.

It shines! Could this be it?

The part in the drawing wasn't round. It had three marks too.

Right. That's for another job.

This thread was beside the tray.

The cover has a blue edge. It must have left this thread here.

We folded the cover here while cleaning. It's on my cart in the inner yard now.

Could the part be caught in a fold?

I heard a click when you pushed the cart. I thought it was a wheel.

Good clue. Let's unfold the cover together.

Maybe you heard the missing part, not the wheel.

I'll listen again. Maybe the part will call out its name.

It won't talk, but it might show us where it is.

That's enough. I wasn't expecting a long chat.

Hold the edge. Let's keep it off the ground.

There's a lump in this fold. The cover isn't flat here!

There! I put it on the cover while wiping the tray.

The cover took our part for a ride!

TINK!

It slipped! Down below!

Keep the cart still. Let's see where it fell first.

We just found you! Too soon to say goodbye!

It's rolling toward the wooden door!

You can park here!

Right. Now it's parked indoors.

Let's lift the bundles to reach underneath.

I can't see it from here.

Let's get some light. Yusuf, could you open that shutter?

Cat is already looking from a different side.

I see it! All three marks.
Behind the leg on the right.

Good. Now we know where to look.

We'll take the big bundles. Can you carry this light one?

Got it! This time my arms are working,
not my ears!

The way is clear. I'll spread the clean felt here.

Here it comes... Keep the felt a bit flatter!

Nice and flat. This is the end of the road.

Got it! And none of us had to fly.

We had to manage this first.

Time to check it. Finding it matters, but so does making sure it's sound.

Two round ends
and three marks.
This is our part.

Yes. The edge is sound too. Now I'll check the fastenings again.

Does this tray have a lid?
Let's end the trip here.

It does. This time I'll close it and put it away.

Are you checking all the wings again?

Yes. Finding one part doesn't mean we forget the rest.

May I try those little wings too?

We can see how they fit on the ground. They're not for flying.

I'll learn to stand first. No hurry.

Did you hear? A test on the ground.

I heard. The ground and I get along well.

Relax your arms.
We're supporting both sides.

The wings are ready. Why don't
I feel any lighter?

Wearing wings
isn't enough to fly.

So now I'm just a very wide bear.

For now. And you'll need to go through doors sideways.

I've landed!

You hadn't even taken off!

Still, that was a very soft landing.

We need you on the ground crew today.

Now that's a job I know well.

I'll get ready in Galata. Go to Üsküdar with Yusuf.

We'll watch from the other shore!

How will we spot you? There are so many birds up there!

I think you'll spot the biggest wings right away.

We won't take our eyes off the sky.

You noticed so much today. Together we found what I'd missed.

You showed us to look carefully instead of rushing.

I'm crossing too. I have no wings, but I do have a seat.

A seat really matters on your travels!

CLAP! CLAP!

He made it! He's reached Üsküdar!

On behalf of the ground crew: welcome!

How did Istanbul look from above?

It's lovely to see you here.

Streets were thin lines, boats tiny dots.

I looked from a cushion today. That was interesting too.

Without you, who would have heard that little sound?

So I didn't fly, but my ears helped!

It's time for us to go home too. Goodbye!

We'll visit again. Even if nothing is missing next time!

Goodbye, sharp-eyed explorers. See you again!

WHOOSH!

This time we're going home, not across the water!
